HEFTY PUNISHMENTS FOR LICENSELESS CARBON-MARKET DEALERS

Environment Cabinet Secretary Soipan Tuya

Crafted by the Environment Cabinet Secretary Miss. Soipan Tuya, the punitive measures on traders without licenses are a part of the government's plan to seamlessly deal with the effects of climate change while still selling carbon credits.

while all individuals seeking to participate will be required to apply for licensing from the Designated National Authority that's to be established by the regulations, after having paid a stipulated fee.

By extension, all applicants shall from time to time apply corresponding adjustments to ensure that there's no increase in emission.

Other institutions to supplement the DNA include sector of carbon registries, national carbon registries, carbon assessment technical committee, climate change directorate.

Further provisions under the regulations allows the CS to trade carbons for internationally transferred mitigation outcomes.

If the Climate Change (Carbon Market Regulation Bill) 2023 is passed, dealers who operate without license will face either a hefty ksh. 500 million in fine, 10 years in prison or both, City Bite now understands.

Carbon Market is a trading system where individuals sell and buy carbon credits, which are permits that allow the owner to emit specified amounts of carbon dioxide in the air.

According to the draft regulations, carbon market projects are to undergo environmental and social impact assessment conducted by the environmental management and coordination act and its regulations.

Carbon emission is reported to be a major threat to the Ozone layer by environmentalists.

'Any person who undertakes a carbon market project without an international, national, bilateral and project-based agreement without the approval of the Cabinet Secretary commits an offence,' a section of the draft regulations document, which targets the carbon market in its entirety, including in, on, above or below the land and airspace of Kenya reads. It will also provide a framework for credit projects and programs

Kenya's President H.E William Ruto

Through a special Kenya gazette issue Vol.CXXVI-NO.3, President William Ruto on Monday the 8th of January revoked the appointments of some four members of the board of directors at Kenya Railways Corporation, who incredibly enough were all appointed by former head of state H.E Uhuru Kenyatta.

a fragment of the gazette notice, which further indicates that the revocation was made with immediate effect reads.

OPINION: IT WILL BE AN OPEN ROAD FOR EDWARD ONYANGO

Central in the National Assembly will be an open road, considering his history, genealogy, political acumen and resumé in the private sector.

"Bob has the networks, the experience and the blood to lead," a city analyst tells City Bite. "Given his bloodline, it is believed that he has the character of a natural born leader and if you follow Mr. Odinga's politics, history takes a centre stage in his decision making. That having been said, history favors Edward in very many ways and this is a factor that could easily influence Mr. Odinga to give him significant attention." He concludes.

To him, the fact that Mr. Onyango is the grandson of the late mama Grace Onyango could play a role if he were to get the blessings of ODM boss Raila Odinga.

While this could remain just an independent opinion, a garrulous Nyalenda B ward MCA Hon. James Oyugi Were recently affirmed that the Kakwacha Chain of restaurants' boss boasts an added advantage in the race to succeed gubernatorial hopeful Dr. Joshua Oron if he were to make it to the ballot sub rosa his genealogy.

Nyalenda B Ward MCA James Oyugi Were.

"Raila Odinga is passionate about history," James tells this writer. "If Bob, Mama Grace Onyango's grandson presents himself for an election, our party leader could easily support him because he comes from a family of natural leaders. As a disclaimer, I want to be clear that ODM is a party of democracy and as such, the electorate decides who leads them. However, Bob's history will be an added advantage." He concludes.

As the 2023-2027 political cycle ages on, a significant number of young politicians are breaking through to the limelight en vogue. For Kisumu County, there is a fireball, approaching to land in the soil of Kisumu Central Constituency at a terrific speed and with a force so powerful, second only to that of gravity.

Edward Onyango is now an omnipresent name in the households of Kisumu City County, having spent a decent part of last year sponsoring community development projects and now, according to seasoned political analysts, once his political ambitions mature to see the light of the day, the race to represent Kisumu

YOUNG PEOPLE ARE RE-SHAPING THE FUTURE OF POLITICS IN KISUMU COUNTY

UDA Treasurer Aspirant for Kisumu County Mrs. Valentine Aela

The age-old youth inclusion concept seem to molt and permanently stay in it's baby-steps stage with every new political cycle and regime of the day. Since time immemorial, youth inclusion has topped agendas in every politician's campaign promises the world over without them giving a substantive blueprint on how to achieve a satisfactory level of youth representation.

For Kisumu County young leaders, things have to change, no matter the cost as they did during the era of reformation activists and scholars like Martin Luther and John Calvin, who were widely considered the pillars of reformation.

"If Kenya will progress, grey areas like youth inclusion have to be definitively addressed," Valentine Aela tells this writer.

"In my view, there has to be a paradigm shift in the style of politics in our country. Senior leaders must welcome the idea of giving young people a chance, and that's exactly what we are fighting for in UDA Party, which evidently accomodates many young people in it's decision making tables." She concludes.

In 2022, Valentine took the bold step to vie against a political veteran Hon. Ruth Odinga in a toe to toe race that even though the latter won, it is the former's audacity that remains fresh in the minds of many residents in Kisumu.

Former Senatorial Aspirant Phillip Pande

She has since established a youth movement in the county to nurture young leaders and spearhead the idea of inclusion through her high end networks in the corridors of power.

Other notable contributors to this theme are Seth Okumu and Phillip Pande, who is nationally known for his role in the Raila Odinga presidential campaign, prior to which he was a senatorial aspirant for Kisumu County, boldly up against heavyweights like professor Tom Ojienda, Professor Patrick Ayiecho and Robert Ouko's niece Mrs. Rose Nyamunga. To date, Pande plays a critical role in policy advocacy and mentorship of young leaders countrywide.

UDAYouth Representative aspirant Wakili Seth Okumu

Seth Okumu on the other hand is at the forefront of the quest to popularize the ruling UDA in Kisumu, regardless of the alien nature of the party among the luo community.

Other notable opinion shapers include Joseph Adede, Sammy Odoro, General Oguk, Emmanuel Otieno, Ken Odongo, Scott Erick and Jeronim Obwar.

PERSON OF THE WEEK; JOHNSON SAKAJA

Nairobi County Governor H.E Johnson A. Sakaja

County with what its designers have described as nutritious meals at a subsidised cost of simply kshs 5.

According to a post on X by Mr. Sakaja, 100, 000 children were registered to the program on the 8th of January alone, bringing the total number of beneficiaries to a figure in the north of 180,000 after some 84,000 pupils were enrolled in the first phase of the initiative that was launched yesteryear.

A Pupil enjoying a lunch meal; courtesy of the Dishi na County Initiative

"100,000 children registered today bringing the total number of children on the program to 184,000 as from tomorrow. Happy to see increased enrollment in our schools already being reported on day one. Lazima iWork." A post on the governor's X timeline reads.

While this project has elicited generally positive feedback, it is the style of its execution that makes Sakaja the City Bite's person of the week, as parents among other stakeholders in education have lauded him for the ingenuity of this specific idea.

While talking to our reporters, one parent said; "We are so grateful to God for taking us this far. It is an open secret that many doubted our Governor during the campaigns. They even tried to assassinate his character, just to see him fail but all thanks to God, we are here and the burden of costly lunch meals for our children is no longer there. May our super governor live long." She concludes.

Pupils from diverse schools across Nairobi line up for a meal, served by Sakaja

Sakaja continues to expose both his leadership & political genius as almost all his simple ideas are gradually materializing

This week, Nairobi City County's Chief Executive H.E Johnson Arthur Sakaja stole the limelight, having launched the second phase of his Dishi Na County Program, which will benefit more than 100, 000 pupils across Nairobi and could be one of his greatest achievements when curtains fall on his leadership career.

On the day of the launch, Mr. Sakaja whom commentators have described as a man making tiny but effectively significant bites into a gigundo collection of promises that he served to the public during his campaigns, enjoyed a series of memorable moments with pupils from across different schools in Nairobi County.

THE ENEMY COULD BE ROAMING THE CORRIDORS OF POWER

By Odima Osure

As relevant bodies work around the clock to establish the circumstances leading to the alleged murder of deceased Meru blogger and activist Daniel Muthiani, I can't help but wonder why since time immemorial, fierce critiques of those who wield instruments of power have faced mysterious deaths the world over.

In the history of Kenya, by a way of illustration, Muthiani is only one among a plethora of souls the country has lost, allegedly due to their antagonistic stand points in politics. For instance, in 2017, at the height of preparations for the general election, the then IT manager the late Chris Msando went missing for a day or so before his mutilated body was reportedly found in Kikuyu Forest alongside that of a young college girl identified as Carol Ngambu, who was said to have been, upto the time of their tragic deaths in a romantic relationship with Mr. Msando. While Kenyans from all walks of life decried the heinous act of inhumanity, calling for swift investigation, not a single suspect has been identified a sexennial later.

Six or so years apart, the puzzling demise of Mr. Muthiani follows a similar trend, after his putrefied body was found in a thicket in Tharaka Nithi County, 60 kilometers away from his own home village in Igembe Central 14 days since he was first reported missing.

Detectives cordon the home of Muthiani's murder suspect

What is it with thickets, forests and missing political contributors?. When the iconic Robert Ouko went missing, his body was found in the heart of a bush in got Alila, Muhoroni Constituency. Unlike Msando and Daniel, Mr. Ouko's alleged killers were 'magnanimous' enough to drop him not too far from home but like all the rest, the phenomena of who murdered him and for what reasons remain unresolved to date.

To the critical eye, this is no coincidence. It is deliberate. The evil orchestrators of these extrajudicial killings could be those with enough resources to subbotage investigative procedures. The enemy could be the charismatic ones, who during the day roam around the mainstream media channels, talking about the rule of law and other fancy words like freedom of expression, the right to life among others.

As we wait for any difference in the Muthiani Murder investigation, a teething need exists for the justice system to plug is their leak in solving politically related deaths.

MAISHA PROJECT WAS INSPIRED BY MY CHILDHOOD STORY

Beatrice Williamson is the Founder & Director of The Maisha Project

While talking to Jen Vellenga and Jennifer Retelle Thomas of Speak With Presence podcast, Beatrice gives the scintillating story behind the Oklahoma based organization, which was largely influenced by her childhood days. " I grew up in a small village in Kisumu -Kenya," Williamson recounts. " As a young girl, my family and I had limited opportunities. Both my parents Lanson, who she met at the age of nine, Beatrice could've ended up in an underage marriage set up which was a ubiquitous culture in Africa during her childhood days.

Maisha Project's board Chairperson Dr. Kevin McAfee

In a world where every new day comes with it's own challenges, it takes tremendous courage to live for other people. To make a difference by bridging the little gaps that many have ignored. To change the course of a vulnerable child's destiny. To home the homeless, to feed the hungry and to mentor the ambitious. Such, is the work being done by The Maisha Project; an international public benefit organization that work with remote communities and local governments to change lives in many different dimensions.

Founded in the year 2006 by a then 30 year old Ms. Beatrice Williamson, the organization has sponsored the education of over 900 children while serving over 1,700 patients in the Maisha Medical Clinic and by extension,over 600 volunteers have participated in their many projects, some of which have seen well over 1.9 million nutritious meals served to those in need.

Beatrice with some beneficiaries of the Maisha Project's scholarship program.

had low income jobs, earning upto only one dollar or less a day, which made feeding my siblings and I, let alone paying our school fees a herculean task for them .However, through God, I was given an opportunity at a dire moment in my life. For that, I decided to pay back by creating a platform to abet the pursuit of dreams for vulnerable children in the grass-roots" She concludes.

Per her own story,were it not for the benevolence of a senescent Swedish missionary named Ana Maisha project continues to grow in scope,with their main objectives leaning on UNSDGs 1(No Poverty) , 2(Zero Hunger), 3(Good health and well being) and 4(Quality Education) , while for Beatrice who vied for the Kisumu County women Representative seat in 2022, the dream lives on and could be rekindled in the next general election.

To beneficiary communities, Williamson is a gift that keeps on giving, who's legacy is already engraved in an indelible ink in Kisumu County.

GENDER EQUITY SHOULD BE THE ULTIMATE GOAL

By Ochieng' Abong'o

In the pursuit of achieving an optimal state of gender parity, it becomes imperative to retire the prevailing cancel culture methodology concerning the vulnerabilities of young boys and men. Analogous to their female counterparts, male individuals innately embody the entirety of the nine quotients of life, encompassing crucial emotional intelligence. This facet, perceived as a pronounced disparity between genders through the lens of natural selection, underscores the need for a recalibration of societal expectations.

While societal norms dictate an elevated echelon of emotional intelligence for men, dismantling the entrenched belief in their stoic invulnerability is imperative. This entrenched belief system, which mandates an unwavering facade of strength, has obfuscated society's perception of the multifaceted challenges confronting men, thereby eroding the once solid foundation of gender equality.

The inception of the concept of gender equality, emanating from Middle Eastern origins with the noble ambition to champion parity with men, substantiates the assertion that achieving absolute equality is an elusive endeavor. The innate truth remains – human beings, akin to the asymmetry of our own fingers, are inherently unequal. The path forward, then, lies not in futile attempts to homogenize individuals but in the equitable provision of opportunities. This nuanced understanding crystallizes into what we term as gender equity. To truly manifest equity, our collective efforts must be harmoniously channeled, propelling young boys into realms of empowerment equivalent to the strides we have taken in fostering the growth of young girls and women.

In societies disproportionately focused on amplifying the empowerment of one gender to the detriment of the other, an ominous confluence of repercussions unfurls. Misogyny, toxic feminism, gender-based violence, and, to an unsettling extent, domestic turmoil burgeon, giving rise to a tapestry of instability within families.

Kenya's Second Lady and Boy-Child empowerment champion Pastor Dorcas Rigathi

It is against this complex backdrop that I extend commendation to Pastor Dorcas Rigathi for her courageous initiative. In a landscape dominated by burgeoning feminist movements, her steadfast commitment to championing the empowerment of the boy child stands as a singular beacon of influence.

FORWAC Kenya Director Mrs. Margaret Okello

At the risk of getting schmaltzy, this writer takes a moment to recount a life changing rendezvous. Thirteen years ago, this scrivener was a barefoot class eight leaver, without a thin hope of what the future held, regardless of being among the top performers in the then just concluded Kenya Certificate of Primary Education.

However, the course of his destiny took a sharp turn after an encounter with Mama Margaret Okello of West Gem ward in Siaya County, who, through effortless generosity consolidated funds to sponsor his education.

As of now, he is a bachelor degree holder, with a future so full of promise that seem to grow brighter by the age of the day.

As the long serving director of the Friends of Rural Women and Children, Mrs.

THE BEACON OF HOPE

Okello boasts a sterling reputation in community service and the public benefit sector, having not only sponsored a significant number of children to schools but also supported community development projects within the borders of Gem Constituency and beyond.

Pupils from FORWAC learning centre pose for a photograph.

While talking to our reporters, an acquaintance identified only as Omosh said "To mama, education is the first step towards achieving a resilient society. Since her return to Kenya from abroad, she has served our community with diligence. She has treated our children like hers, our wives like her daughters in-law and our mothers like her own sisters. I have encountered many philanthropists but none was as open minded as she is." He concludes.

In Gem Constituency, it is said that a significant number of degree holders are her proteges, some of whom are currently enjoying success in their respective fields of education-this particular writer included-.

FORWAC Learning Centre Administration Block

Currently, she continue to shine hope in the lives of many young people in West Gem through education in her capacity as the Director for FORWAC learning centre, where there is an access to basic education at a subsidised fee. There, many children from vulnerable families are getting quality education, thus keeping their dreams alive.

Noteworthy is the fact that through the institution, many people in the adjacent community have gained employment as teachers and subordinate staff.

To her, nothing is more pleasurable than serving humanity, for such they say, is service to God.

UNHEALTHY DIET TO BLAME FOR INCREASING DIABETES CASES

By Emmanuel Otieno Obwanga

From the past, cases of Diabetes were believed to be an age factor whereby older people would fall victims of this vice. However this narrative has spontaneously shifted from age debate to lifestyle, to be more precise diet.

Unhealthy diet has significantly contributed to diabetic infections amongst young people today. The intake of high levels of processed foods, drinks with sugar and unhealthy fats has been linked to an increased risk of developing type 2 diabetes especially in younger individuals.

It's peculiar to find people liking such type of foods albeit the existence of healthy foodstuffs. Such unhealthy diets lead to obesity and insulin resistance which are key contributors and risk factors in the development of diabetes. Additionally, a diet high in refined carbohydrates such as canned fruits, doughnuts, soda,

Potato chips and corn chips, gummy candy and French fries can cause rapid spikes in blood sugar levels, placing strain on the body's ability to produce and utilize insulin unfortunately these are highly consumed amongst the younger generation with chips and soda topping the list. Unknowingly these factors combined are greatest contributors to the onset of Diabetes.

A graphic of junk food that could cause Diabetes.

It's funny to hear people considering fruits as only appetizers while linking vegetables to herbs and rarely consuming whole grains which are key components of healthy diets which when consumed in small amounts may exacerbate diabetes infection.

It's important to note that as we eat different foods we need to consider and factor in the dietary aspect, otherwise too much sugar and sweet food might just be a trap in the offing.

LARRY MADOWO'S MESSAGE TO KCSE CLASS OF 2023 ELICITS MIXED REACTIONS

International Correspondent For CNN Larry Madowo

In a stunning reaction to the released 2023 KCSE results, flamboyant CNN International correspondent Larry Madowo stirred mixed reactions among X users after posting a screenshot of an article he wrote back in the year 2016, with a caption that reads; "Yes, I failed KCSE but it was not the end of my life."

Alluding to his own life story, Mr. Madowo tells candidates that failing KCSE does not spell doom to the future of an individual as success is not inherently hinged on academic excellence, but the diligent pursuit of it.

In the article dated 8th March 2016, Larry recounts the pressure he was put through by his own relatives, some of whom he describes to have been sufficiently scandalised to demand that he repeats form four, something he says was never a part of his plans. "I failed KCSE but I did 45 foreign trips last year to 27 different countries. My B- in the national exam was so bad I was getting pushed to repeat form four. Do not let anyone put you under pressure" a graphic from Kenyans.co.ke digital media handles reads.

While his message bore a significant measure of truth, it is the ambivalent responses from Kenyans on X that stole the limelight. For instance, in response to Madowo's claims, vocal Kenyan-Canadian lawyer Miguna Miguna wrote on X

"Larry Madowo is an empty toothy African buffoon. White men who run CNN prefer primitive buffoons like him. He thinks that travelling around the world is a great achievement. He is just an exalted Kariuki Chotara! We won't let him misguide our children that learning and academic excellence mean nothing."

Veteran Kenyan-Canadian Lawyer Miguna Miguna

While responding to his post, some X users conquered with him, while others, in a classical Kenyan fashion vehemently disagreed with him with some calling him jealous.

Peculiarly, some neitizens insisted that Larry's statement was more of a humble-brag than a word of encouragement.

GAMBIAN SQUAD ESCAPED DISASTER BY A WHISKER

GAMBIA

AFCON bound Gambian National team was on Thursday forced to turn back home minutes after their flight took off.

The entire team was to fly to Abidjan when unfortunately, their 'small' plane experienced blatant technical failure, leaving them on edge. However, fortunately enough, everybody walked out of the frustrating scenario safely.

After an emergency landing in Banjul, preliminary investigations revealed that the plane had lost its cabin pressure and oxygen, causing some players to pass out.

While talking to the press, Tom Saintfiet, the Gambian National Team Coach said; "We could all have been dead. We all fell asleep quickly. Me, too. I had short dreams about how my life was done. Really and truly. After nine minutes, the pilot decided to return because there was no oxygen supply. Some players did not wake up [until] immediately after landing. We almost got carbon monoxide poisoning. Another half-hour of flying and we would all have been dead."

However, former Manchester United player Saidy Janko took his frustrations to social media, claiming that they experienced inhumane heat that coupled with the lack of oxygen caused dizziness Gambian Football Federation President Lamine Kabba Bajo among players while some started to pass out.

In their official statement, the Gambian Football Federation say that the flight had been on air for just nine minutes when the crew discovered a technical hitch and swiftly made the decision to return to Banjul.

Air Côte d'Ivoire, the company that operate the plane has since tasked a technical team to conduct thorough assessment and correct the anomaly.
